This presentation will highlight recent and pending U.S. regulatory developments pertaining to hexavalent chromium, as well as new and emerging international requirements from the European Union under REACH. It will also focus on potentially broader changes underway with respect to regulation of metals and chemicals in the next Administration and Congress, as well as new attention in the European Union on key alternatives to hexavalent chromium, particularly with respect to nickel and its compounds.